

The wheels occupy the four corners of a rhombus. The passengers sit back-to-back, cocooned in what looks like an inverted wing. Petrol consumption is low and wind-tunnel scores are remarkably good (Cw 0,129) The name: lynx. Matthijs van Dijk and Edwin Otten came up with this unusual, albeit not wholly new car concept for their graduate project.

*Chris Reinewald,
free-lance journalist*

Cocoon

A cocoon on a lozenge

op ruitwiel